1. Mr. Kirkpatrick advised me that the Clandestine Services had agreed to the promotion of [REDACTED] provided the Office of the Director would furnish the slot and provided also that [REDACTED] would bring this slot with him when he returns to the Clandestine Services at some later date. I directed Emmett Echols to look into this right away and to determine whether the Director does, in fact, have the necessary slot.

2. Mr. Kirkpatrick queried me as to when we could start using the West parking lot - he hoped by 18 June. Accordingly, I visited this lot at lunch time today and found very little activity. I telephoned [REDACTED] and asked him to investigate. He later returned my call to say that the gravel sub-contractor, as well as the curbing contractor, had quit. I told him to put all the pressure he possibly could on this and to prepare a memorandum to the Director for my signature explaining what had happened and when we expected the work to be finished. (I also asked Alan to prepare a memorandum to the Director giving the prognosis on the auditorium with reasons why it appears to be delayed so long. In this connection I also saw George Johnson of Harrison & Abramovitz today and emphasized to him again that I was most unhappy about the delays on the auditorium and wanted to do everything possible to expedite it.)

3. [REDACTED] telephoned again to request an exception to the age requirements for summer employees for his son, who is about two months too young to qualify.

His grounds are that [REDACTED] Records Integration Division, has expressed a real need for Ray's son to be used as an Italian translator. I told Ray that I would certainly look into this right away, and I have asked [REDACTED] to do so, emphasizing that we must protect ourselves if we make this exception. As a minimum, [REDACTED] 25X1A9a

[REDACTED] should go on the line to the effect that he has a requirement for which young

[REDACTED] is uniquely qualified, and Personnel should insure that none of the other 120 youngsters who were turned down have the necessary qualifications.
